

EDHEC appoints Tristan-Pierre Maury as Associate Dean of Graduate Studies

Paris, 29 August 2023—EDHEC Business School is pleased to announce the appointment of Professor Tristan-Pierre Maury, an Economist and respected researcher, as Associate Dean of Graduate Studies.

In this new role, Maury will further develop EDHEC's portfolio of Master's programmes and its PhD in Finance. He will also ensure that the school reaches specific strategic goals in academic excellence, educational innovation, and international growth. His appointment was effective June 1, 2023.

An academic with diverse research interests

Professor Maury holds a doctorate in macroeconomics from the University Paris Nanterre (2001), a master's degree in applied mathematics from the University Paris-Dauphine (1997), and a bachelor's degree in philosophy from the Sorbonne (1997).

Maury served as deputy research director of the EDHEC Economic Research Centre from 2010 to 2016. In 2021, he spearheaded the creation of two new EDHEC degree programmes: the Master of Public Affairs Management double degree with Sciences Po Lille and the online MSc in Data Management and Business Analytics degree offered in partnership with Imperial College in London.

EDHEC and Imperial College are founding members of the Future of Management Education Alliance, a partnership of like-minded business schools with a shared vision to catalyze digital innovation in business education.

Maury's research focuses on three major themes: diversity and inclusion in education, housing politics, and public policy assessment methods.

Leading the way in business education

Maury's dual academic training in economics and the humanities will help him create innovative education options for young people who want to have a positive impact in their career lives. We are excited to see how he will use his knowledge and expertise in management, human sciences, and data to create degree programmes that meet society's needs today, tomorrow, and in the distant future.

"I am honoured to accept this mission and am keenly aware of what's at stake for our school," says Maury. "Teaching management today means integrating and anticipating the profound changes our society is undergoing, such as climate change, social challenges, and the AI revolution. There are expectations from students, the business world, and society at large to explore these topics and master them, so my main duty will be to create Master's degree programmes, including hybrid programmes, that respond to this demand and channel the energy and talents of a new generation."

Sciences Po Lille is an elite higher education institute specialising in political studies located in Lille, France.*
